Report on event “Research methods in experimental pharmacology”

A One-day Workshop on “Research methods in experimental pharmacology” has been organized by the Department of Pharmacy, Avanthi Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Guntapally on 22-07-2018. A.Venkat Rathnam, Netaji Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Associate Professor has discussed about Research methods in experimental pharmacology. Students got awareness on Research methods in experimental pharmacology. Even though finding new medications is costly and time-consuming, it is nevertheless essential for treating both novel and old ailments. The drug discovery process has accelerated due to the availability of modern technological technologies, which has made it easier to produce more customized therapeutics. At times, the drug administration technique may be the most important factor in achieving the intended therapeutic outcomes.

A One-day seminar on “Proper animal handling & Good Research Practices” has been organized by the Department of Pharmacy, Avanthi Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Guntapally on 18-10-2018. Dr.Venkata Ramana Devi, Professor, Osmania University has discussed about Proper animal handling & Good Research Practices. Students got awareness on Proper animal handling & Good Research Practices. Only technical experts are employed to handle animals since it requires their correct care. Employers should hire professionals with the necessary training (veterinary scientists, pharmacists) to handle laboratory animals, and they should offer on-the-job training in addition to formal instruction to guarantee that animals are handled properly.

Dr.K.Kiran, Associate Professor, MRM College of Pharmacy has discussed about Research Methodology. Students got awareness on Research Methodology. One approach to methodically addressing the research challenge is through research technique. It might be viewed as a science that studies scientific research methodology. In it, we examine the many approaches that a researcher typically takes to analyze his research challenge and the reasoning behind them.

Report on event "A research on herbal medicine Current trends and future prospects"

A One-day Seminar on "A research on herbal medicine Current trends and future prospects" has been organized by the Department of Pharmacy, Avanthi Institute of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Guntapally on 21-06-2019. Dr. Sandeep Sen, Professor, Guru Nanak Institutions Technical Campus discussed about "A research on herbal medicine Current trends and future prospects". Students got awareness on "A research on herbal medicine Current trends and future prospects". The number of patients pursuing complementary and alternative medicine is rapidly increasing. The combination of generations of indigenous medical practitioners' therapeutic experiences spanning over hundreds of years results in herbal medicines. Not only are herbal medications more widely used in underdeveloped countries for primary healthcare needs, but they are also more widely accepted culturally, have fewer negative effects on the body, and are less likely to induce adverse effects.
